Dear Mr. Crossman:

On November 17 and 18, 1986, several Los Alamos National Laboratory personnel visited your office to review files that you had obtained from Margaret Anne Rogers. Many documents were photocopied at that time. The copies of the original documents were sorted and placed into our files under our Comprehensive Environmental Assessment and Response Program (CEARP). During the sorting process, some original documents (three handwritten pages) were found that had inadvertently been placed with the photocopied material. These documents were put aside for the purpose of returning them to you. Unfortunately, they were then misplaced and forgotten. We discovered our error last week when these documents were found among other documentation during preparation of a CEARP report.

I am now returning these documents to you. They were the only originals found to have been mixed in with the photocopied material.

Sincerely,

Harold E. Valencia
Area Manager
