Subject: Permit Question

Allen,

I have an answer to your question about the language in the permit Public Notice "The regulatory justifications for imposing corrective action are contained in the NMED's technical support documents filed in the administrative record." So, the technical support documents in the record include things like Western's permit application, correspondence (NODs, spill notices, etc.), the permit itself, regulations (RCRA and federal register notices). You can make arrangements with Pam Allen (call the general office number at 476-6000) to come in and look at the administrative record or you can request a copy of the index of the administrative record. The refinery should have most, if not all, of the documentation. I'm not sure if this helps, it's basically everything you've sent us and we've sent you plus the regulations. If you have any questions call me.

Thanks,
Kristen
